The strike among the machinists at the Sprague Electric Elevator Works, Watsessing, which was in progress for ten weeks, has been declared off. A few days ago a committee from the strikers had a conference with the employers, and it was decided that if the strike should be called off the company would give a list of those who could return. Of the sixty-six men who went out, only twenty-six are to be taken back. Some of these went to work this morning.

Allen S. Wass, Superintendent of the Domestic Sewing Machine Works in Newark, residing on Ashland Ave., is an admirer of poultry. While walking along Commerce Street, opposite Centre Market, Newark, on Tuesday, he saw a crate of chickens that caught his fancy in front of Schooser & Co.'s. store. "Nice chickens, these" spoke up a young man who was sitting on the crate, "and I'll sell 'em cheap." Wass looked them over and finally struck a bargain with the young man to buy the fowl for $11.50. He handed over a $20 bill and the supposed salesman said: "Wait until I get change." With that the man disappeared and Wass after a long wait learned from the storekeepers that the affable young man had no connection with the house. He then realized that he had been swindled.

The Second Ward Republican Club held their regular meeting on Tuesday night. About twenty-five members were present. Director Thomas McGowan of the Board of Chosen Freeholders was endorsed by the Club for Register of Deeds at the Republican County Convention to be held at Orange. Complaint was made by Mr. Haskell on account of the sand which was hauled on to the club property, north of the Greenwood Lake Railroad, which covered the sidewalk. The Building Committee were instructed to negotiate a loan to build the new club house according to the plans adopted by the members.

GLEN RIDGE NOTES.

Mr. and Mrs. Mapes of Clark Street have returned.

Mrs. George Linn and daughter of Hillside Avenue, accompanied by Mrs. Graves, have gone to Washington, D. C.

Mrs. F. J. Goodwin has gone to Bethlehem, Pa., for a week.

Mrs W. F. Upson of Douglas Road accompanied by her mother, start this week for the Hot Springs of Virginia, where the former hopes to obtain relief from a rheumatic trouble from which she is suffering at present.

Mr. and Mrs. Wardwell and daughter have returned to Glen Ridge for the winter.

Mr. George Garloch of Douglas Road, who has been ill in Milwaukee, has so far recovered as to be able to come home this week.

Mrs. Crossman, who has been visiting her mother, Mrs. Belloni of Ridgewood Avenue, has returned to her home.

Mrs. Dayton and her son, Mr. Charles Dayton, of Lincoln Street, have leased the Metcalf house on Douglas Road.

The ladies of Christ Church Guild will hold a "Festival of Holidays" November 16, 17, 18. It promises to be a very unique entertainment and a fine opportunity will be offered to procure Christmas gifts. A fine dinner will be served daily and many sources of amusement will be offorded the little ones each afternoon.

At a regular monthly meeting of Lincoln Hook and Ladder Co., held last Friday evening, Mr. John A. Brown was elected Foreman; Mr. B. R. Jacobs having resigned the position in consequence of having been appointed Chief Engineer of the department.

The first meeting of the Ladies' Vocal Club was held last Monday afternoon.

Miss Millie Freeman is ill at her home on Douglas Road.

A Glen Ridge Library Fund has been established and several gentlemen have contributed generously.

Messrs. John Raasbach and son of Maolis Avenue have taken part of the store occupied by the Bloomfield Coal & Supply Co. and will open a branch office Oct. 15th.

Mr. Arthur Grissom on the editorial staff of the New York Journal will occupy Mr. Frank Borrn's house on Hamilton Road during Mr. Borrn's absence abroad.

A musical entertainment followed by a dance for the benefit of the Library will be held at the Glen Ridge Hall Oct. 15th.

The fourth annual meeting of the Golf Club of Glen Ridge was held on Monday evening at the Club House, and a large number of members were present. The report of the Executive Committee showed that golf was as popular in this vicinity as elsewhere. During the year thirty-eight new members have joined, bringing the total membership up to within eight of the limit. Last spring an entirely new course was laid out by Bendulow, whose knowledge and experience is second to none in the Country. The Glen Ridge Club was one of the first in the Country to organize. The following officers were elected for the ensuing year: President, John W. Steward; Vice President, Allison Dodd; Secretary and Treasurer, B. R. Jacobs. Supper was served and all voted the Club House not only a necessity but a luxury.

The best social element was highly delighted as well as entertained last Wednesday evening at the new hall of the Fire Department, when the Hose Company gave its second annual concert. All the familiar faces of Glen Ridge's 400 were present to lend their encouragement to the cause, and the Fire Department is to be congratulated upon so auspicious an inauguration of their pretty little hall. Mr. Dillon was received with much applause and the shouts of laughter indicated his power in driving away "dull care." Miss Gertrude Carland in her recitations was also most pleasing, as well as the Metropolitan Quartette whose music was rendered most sweetly. The Magician's tricks were as mysterious as ever and the pianist did his part well. The success of the entertainment was largely due to the united efforts of the Entertainment Committee: W. E. Smith, Manager; S. B. Muir, Treasurer; J. H. Mylod, Secretary.

The Clutch Of the Law.

Domestic happiness can easily be kept out of the clutches of the law if all wives will take a hint from a man. A man is a person which is ruled by his stomach, and his stomach is ruled by the food put into it, so really the food a man eats decides whether he shall be cross or good-humored, whether he shall do good or bad work. It is the same way with women, but then they are naturally better tempered.

We guarantee good temper along with this choice, tender meat of ours. Try some for dinner and see if our words are not true.

ENGLISH INNKEEPERS.

Said to Be Mainly Boors Who Treat Patrons as Intruders.

If your pocketbook allows or fate or the desire to see the country compels you to remain in England, there are parts where you can ride on your wheel with great satisfaction and at great expense. Nothing could be more beautiful than the midlands, lovelier than the counties that surround London, but westward go no farther than Bristol or Truro, northward than Chester, avoiding Manchester—that is, unless you mean to go still farther north into Scotland, which at times will repay your enterprise. The southwest is largely to be avoided. Cornwall and Devon have the worst roads in civilized Europe—in fact, the roads and inns explain that the country is not and never has been civilized. In the inns you are often treated as an intruder, and sometimes cheated in a fashion that would bring a blush to the cheek of a Swiss landlord, for the emptiness of the larder the bill makes up in lavishness. There is hardly anything to eat save cream, but for that and salt bacon and ancient eggs you are asked to pay as much as for a good dinner at the Cafe Royal. The innkeepers are mainly boors.

As for the roads, they go straight to the top of all the hills, as uncompromisingly as the roads of Bohemia, then drop down the other side and are unridable in both directions. When not climbing precipitately, they lie buried at the bottom of a ditch. They are shadeless and uninteresting, rarely approaching the seacoast or passing near anything that is worth looking at, and yet we know Englishmen who are profoundly impressed with the belief that they are the best in England, and therefore in the world. The roads, inns and innkeepers of Scotland are in every way better, but the fact that the average Briton spends his holiday on the continent when he can proves not only that he wants to get there, but also that he is driven from his own country by the shortsightedness of the people who keep its inns and look after its roads.—Mr. and Mrs. Pennell in Fortnightly Review.

ANCIENT MEDICAL METHODS

The Manner of Doctors' Consultations In the Fourteenth Century.

Coming to Mondeville's exposition of the method of holding a discussion, we find his description almost a story of what might take place today. "First," he says, "we should inquire into the nature of the disease, examining carefully and feeling, because the diagnosis is made by touching with the hand and observing with the eye. All the consultants engage in turn in the examination. Then, if the case demands it, they make a new examination all together, pointing out to one another the symptoms of disease and the special or remarkable features either in the patient or the disease. Then one of them, the highest in rank, says to the patient, 'Sir, we perceive very clearly what is the matter with you, and you ought to have full confidence in us and be glad that there are so many of us here and such doctors—enough for a king—and to believe that the youngest of us is competent to prescribe and carry on your treatment and bring it to a good result.' Then he interrogates the patient about the circumstances of his attack, 'Sir, do not be displeased or take it ill, but when did your illness begin?' following this with many other questions, the answers to which are recorded as indications furnished by the patient.

"When all the questions called for by the case have been asked, the consultants retire to another room, where they will be alone, for in all consultations the masters dispute with one another in order the better to discuss the truth, and sometimes they come to a pass in the heat of discussion which would cause strangers witnessing their proceeding to suppose there were discord and strife among them. This is sometimes the case."—"Fourteenth Century Doctors," by M. E. Nicaise, in Popular Science Monthly.

Mozart's Method.

Mozart's method of composition was such as could only have been pursued by a child of genius. He would rise early, eat a hearty breakfast and then stroll for several hours in a forest near his home, where, inspired by nature's beauties, heavenly melodies came trooping through his brain. Repairing to his cottage, he would summon his wife, a very witty woman, and bid her tell him stories. He would then mount his high stool and proceed to commit these inspirations to paper, his wife telling him jokes and funny stories while he wrote. These he enjoyed immensely, frequently interrupting her with hearty bursts of laughter and sometimes even falling from the stool and rolling on the floor. But amid all this hilarity and uproar the flow of music which was to move the world went steadily on. His productions were wrought without the least thought or study, but came almost unbidden "direct from heaven." Like Shakespeare, he was purely the creature of inspiration, a genius of the highest order.—C. C. Hiers, in Housekeeper.

Remote Ancestry.

"It has long been supposed," says The Outlook, "that the most startling genealogical claim is that of the negus of Abyssinia, who insists that his descent has been in a straight line from the union of Solomon with the queen of Sheba, but some one has discovered a noble family in France, the counts of Noe, who not only claim Noah as their remote ancestor, but show on their family blazon that veteran seaman in the ark."

Laying Bricks.

A bricklayer can lay about 1,500 or 1,600 bricks in a day of 10 hours where the joints are left rough, about 1,000 per day when both faces have to be worked fair and not more than 500 a day when carefully jointed and faced with picked bricks of a uniform color.—Exchange.

Very Little Money Buys A Big Dress.

No matter whether your taste turns to silks, colored dress stuffs or blacks, a little bit of money will go a long way with you in purchasing your dress in this establishment.

Our forethoughtfulness enables us to present an unrivaled collection of the best and prettiest medium priced fabrics the looms have produced.

The variety of handsome silks at fifty-nine cents, the range of colors and weaves in dress stuffs at seventy-five cents and the host of black fabrics that bear the half-dollar mark are simply unprecedented. The new tariff duties cut no figure at all in the pricing of this splendid stock, and it is our candid belief that no house in Newark or New York offers any better values.

The Home of the Hot Devils.

The greatest natural wonder in Java, if not in the entire world, is the justly celebrated Gheko Kandha Gumko, or "home of the hot devils," known to the world as the Island of Fire. This geological eccentricity is really a lake of boiling mud, situated at about the center of the plains of Grobogans, and is called an island because of the great emerald sea of vegetation which surrounds it and gives it that appearance.

The "island" is about two miles in circumference and is situated at a distance of almost exactly 50 miles from Solo. Near the center of this geological freak immense columns of soft, hot mud may be seen continually rising and falling like great timbers thrust through the boiling substratum by giant hands and then quickly withdrawn.

Besides the phenomenon of the boiling mud columns there are scores of gigantic bubbles of hot slime that fill up like huge balloons and keep up a series of constant explosions, the intensity of the detonations varying with the size of the bubble. In times past, the Javanese authorities say, there was a tall spirelike column of baked mud on the west edge of the lake, which constantly belched a pure stream of cold water, but this has long been obliterated, and everything is now a seething mass of bubbling mud and slime, a marvel to the visitors who come from long distances to see it.

Weighing an Elephant.

An Indian writer relates an interesting anecdote concerning Shahjee, the father of the first ruling prince of Mahrattas of Hindustan, who lived at about the beginning of the seventeenth century. On one occasion a certain high official made a vow that he would distribute to the poor the weight of his own elephant in silver money, but the great difficulty that at first presented itself was the mode of ascertaining what this weight really was, and all the learned and clever men of the court seem to have endeavored in vain to construct a machine of sufficient power to weigh the elephant. At length it is said that Shahjee came forward and suggested a plan which was simple and yet ingenious in the highest degree. He caused the unwieldy animal to be conducted along a stage, specially made for the purpose by the water side, into a flat bottomed boat and then having marked on the boat the height to which the water reached after the elephant had weighed it down the latter was taken out and stones substituted in sufficient quantity to load the boat to the same line. The stones were then taken to the scales, and thus, to the amazement of the court, was ascertained the true weight of the elephant.—Animal Friends.

But Little Danger From Lightning.

Writing on "The Needless Fear of Lightning," Edward W. Bok, in The Ladies' Home Journal, says that "it will doubtless surprise the timid to know that only 200 deaths a year occur on an average throughout this entire country from lightning, or one person in every 350,000 people. Now, in comparison, 15 times as many people are killed each year by falling out of windows, over twice as many from being bitten by rattlesnakes, while 25 per cent more are killed with 'unloaded' pistols. More people are drowned around New York city alone every year than there are deaths from lightning all over the country. In fact, more people by 50 per cent are killed by being kicked by horses in New York city than die from lightning throughout the whole of the United States. The casualties of the south show the dangers of being lynched and of being killed by lightning are about the same. The trolley cars of our cities kill a far greater number of people than do the lightning storms. Now, these are facts. They are strictly accurate and carefully computed."

Anticipating the Obsequy.

A poor man lay dying, and his good wife was sending him with homely but affectionate care. "Don't you think you could eat a bit of something, John? Now what can I get for you?"

With a wan smile he answered feebly: "Well, I seem to smell a ham a-cooking somewheres. I think I could do with a little bit of that."

"Oh, no, John, dear," she answered promptly, "you can't have that. That's for the funeral."—London Telegraph.

German Forts.

The two principal German fortresses on the Baltic sea are at Konigsberg and Dantzic. Central Germany has three first class fortresses, Spandau, Magdeburg and Kastrin; on the French frontier, Metz and Strasburg, and on the Belgian frontier, Cologne and Coblenz.

The Serpent's Sight.

There is a tradition in many parts of Europe that when a serpent's sight grows dim with age he eats fennel and thus regains his vision.
